Hic sunt dracones

During the 15th and 16th century cartographers would place the phrase: "Hic sunt dracones" (here be dragons) on places on the map which were unexplored and unknown. The coronavirus (COVID-19) has forced the world, in general, and South Africa specifically, to enter an uncharted territory. However, what existential crises have taught us is that 'where there is a will, there is a way'. Most governments have reacted to the pandemic swiftly. More so the South African government, that placed South Africa under a lockdown. During this lockdown, while fighting to stop the virus the government inadvertently is also addressing longstanding socio-economic problems. Let us hope that in a post COVID 19 world, the government of South Africa will also react to crime and victimisation the same way they are reacting to the pandemic, swiftly and based on sound reasoning and science. A construct that is coming to the fore, during this difficult time, is that science (from medical science to social science) should take centre stage in terms of producing evidence-based research which could possibly provide solutions in dealing COVID-19. We hope, we as Criminologists, Victimologists and Criminal Justice experts can make a contribution and/or become part of a solution. Now is a time for us to think out of the box and to be creative.

Unprecedented measures by governments such as putting countries on lockdown in order to minimise the daily increase of infections and deaths due to COVID-19 have been applied globally. Let us hope that the dragons we as humanity encounter during these extraordinary times are the dragons of good will towards humankind, selflessness, and the ability to rise above the crisis. We know that this is a very challenging time for all of our CRIMSA members across the continent and hope that everyone is safe, taking good care of themselves and their families. We would like to encourage that you please check on your colleagues during the lockdown. Working remotely comes with its own downsides such as overworking, time management struggles, interruptions in the home, loneliness due lack of human interaction, feeling isolated, and communication issues or feeling like one is out of the loop.

The Next AGM

Regarding the CRIMSA AGM, the current EXCO was in communication before the national lockdown and agreed on having it on the 29th of May in Pretoria. However, since the country is now in lockdown, the AGM will be moved to later in the year. We will, however, distribute all the annual reports to you via email in the next month or so, to keep you updated on the business of CRIMSA. With regard to the AGM, please send your suggestions on how we can go about holding it should travel ban regulations persist and we are unable to organise a “physical” meeting. Is having the meeting virtually an option, and if so, which communication technologies can we make use of (i.e. ZOOM)? Also, since this is a voting AGM (for 2020 – 2022 EXCO and Council members) could we all vote online through the virtual voting system which was introduced in the previous voting AGM? We would love to hear from you, so please send your suggestions regarding these two matter to either to Prof Barkhuizen at Jaco.Barkhuizen@ul.ac.za and/or Dr. Thobane at kwadims@unisa.ac.za by 30 April 2020. We will put all your suggestions together in a Communiqué which will be sent to you via email.

Since the outbreak COVID-19, we have been bombarded with depressing news on infections and death tolls due to the virus. It is for this reason we decided to publish this newsletter to give you a brief break from all the bad news by sharing some positive and exciting news about what CRIMSA and its members have been up to in the latter part of 2019 and first quarter of 2020.

Stay safe, and take care of yourselves and your loved ones.

FROM THE EDITOR

Ms Vuyelwa Maweni

The first quarter of the 2020 academic year has unfolded with a lot of panic and uncertainty for many of us due to the outbreak and rapid spread of the COVID-19 globally. Subsequent to President Ramaphosa’s announcement of the national 21-day lockdown period in an attempt to curb the spread of the virus, our lives took a different turn and this directly affected our traditional ways of living and working. I hope that all CRIMSA members, along with their families and friends are safe, sound and productive in the face of these trying times. In this newsletter, we share some exciting news relating to the publication of the second edition of the Fundamental Criminology book as well as updates on Acta Criminologica.

You are reminded to please renew your CRIMSA membership. See details on how to renew your membership at the end of this newsletter. After renewing your membership, please email your proof of payment to the CRIMSA Secretary (Dr. Mothibi at kholofelo.mothibi@univen.ac.za) and the Treasurer (Mrs. Van Schalkwyk at VjaarI@unisa.ac.za).

Please check that we have your contact details on our mailing list noted correctly. To do so, please communicate with Dr. Mothibi. Please remember that all correspondence related to the newsletter should be emailed to me at Maweniv@ukzn.ac.za.

ACTA CRIMINOLOGICA

Prof Francois Steyn

Our journal went online with authors and reviewers!

The online manuscript submission, review and management system of the Acta Criminologica: African Journal of Criminology and Victimology, went live on 27 September 2019. Prior to that, a small team of colleagues from the universities of the Free State, Limpopo, Cape Town, Pretoria and South Africa attended training and piloted different functions of the online system. Aptara developed the software and our journal was the first with which Sabinet went online. As could be expected, a few glitches occurred at the beginning and we are in close communication with Sabinet regarding the finer functioning of the system and its procedures. At present we are waiting for guidelines for both authors and reviewers on how to better navigate the online system without difficulties. The service providers will also avail short video instructions in this regard.

Thus far we have received fifteen submissions, most of which are in different stages of the review process. The manuscripts originate from various countries and the research themes and methodologies reflect the rich diversity of our discipline.

How to register as an author: From the Acta Criminologica website, access the online system by clicking on the link <http://powerreview.aptaracorp.com/crimsa/acta>. Click on “New User Sign Up” and complete all the fields (those indicated with an asterisk * are compulsory, but please complete all fields because we might call on you in future to review a manuscript or two!). Once the information was submitted, a message appears “Thank you for registration. The login details have been sent to your email account.” The email will indicate both your login name and password. Then sign in.

We would like colleagues to take note of the following when preparing and submitting a manuscript:

- After registering as a user, please check your spam folder as the automated welcoming email might end up there.
- Kindly adhere to the submission specifications, especially anonymising your content manuscript and the names of all files.
- Strictly follow our journal’s guidelines for authors. Often manuscripts fall outside the word length (7 000 to 10 000 words) and/or do not adhere to the referencing style (all in-text references must have page numbers), resulting in them being returned to authors.

I would also like to urge reviewers to please adhere to the turn-around time for their review reports. If you need more time, it can effortlessly be requested via the online system.

The online system is thus far fairly easy to manage and, based on the valuable feedback from authors and reviewers, we regularly liaise with Sabinet to ensure user-friendly and intuitive submission and review procedures. At the same time, a few more glitches may surface as we proceed deeper into the system towards finalising our first online peer reviewed article. Therefore, we ask for your patience should a problem occur. You are more than welcome to send us any suggestions or comments about the system.

A sincere word of appreciation is extended to Erika Janse van Rensburg from Sabinet for her professional and timeous responses to all our requests.

NEWS BRIEFS

CRIMSA VICE-PRESIDENT WINS AN AWARD AT THE 19TH WORLD CONGRESS OF CRIMINOLOGY

Congratulations to Dr. Mahlogonolo Thobane, CRIMSA VP and Senior Lecturer at the UNISA Department of Criminology of Security, for being one of the winners of the International Society of Criminology and the United Nations Office of Drugs and Crime/Education for Justice (E4J) Young Criminologist's Research Paper. Ten winners, across the world, were selected and Dr. Thobane represented Africa. Dr. Thobane's winning paper titled "The South African heist enterprise: Managing its wellspring and concatenation" is based on her research on Cash-in-Transit (CIT) robberies in South Africa. She presented this paper at the conference as well as a TED Talk alongside the other winners during an award ceremony on the 29th of October.

PROF JACOB MOFOKENG HELD INAUGURAL PROFESSORIAL LECTURE

Congratulations to Professor Jacob Mofokeng for facilitating a professorial lecture, which was held on 14 November 2019 at the Tshwane University of Technology (TUT), Pretoria West. His lecture was entitled "Learning to forget: A critical review on knowledge management and knowledge exchange initiatives in the detective service". In his lecture, Prof Mofokeng reviewed factors that influence the success or failure of knowledge management (KM) and knowledge exchange (KE) initiatives as manifested in the South African Police Service (SAPS) with emphasis on detective services.

PROF CHRISTIAAN BEZUIDENHOUT SPEAKER IN RUSSIA AND AWARDED UP INSTITUTIONAL COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT AWARD

Congratulations to Professor Christiaan Bezuidenhout from the University of Pretoria (UP) who was invited to speak at the Kovalyov Readings research-to-practice conference in Yekaterinburg, Russia. The conference was hosted as a Joint International Session between The "Kovalyov Readings" Group and The International Forum: "Criminal Law and Crime in the Age of Global Era" (IFCCLGE) from 12 - 15 February 2020. The Joint Session focussed on aspects of reconciliation and mediation. Prof Bezuidenhout presented a paper on the legal regulation of ancient customs in South Africa. He referred to the Constitution of the Republic of South Africa (Act No. 108 of 1996) in general. The paper further focused on reconciliation in South Africa after democratisation. Prof Bezuidenhout used different case studies to guide his presentation and referred to specific laws to ground his discussion such as The Traditional Health Practitioners Act (Act No. 35 of 2004); The Recognition of Customary Marriages Act (Act No. 120 of 1998); and The Witchcraft Suppression Act (Act No. 3 of 1957).

In addition, Prof Bezuidenhout was awarded the 2019/2020 University of Pretoria (UP) Institutional Community Engagement Award. This award was initiated a few years ago by the Vice Chancellor as an institutional award for community engagement which aligns to UP 2025, Goal 5, which is to strengthen the University's impact on South Africa's social and economic development. Curricular community engagement creates opportunities for innovative learning environments, experiences and assessment practices. As part of the Criminology and Criminal Justice System (KRM 710) module the criminology honours students undertake a seven-week community engagement project. The purpose of this module is to advance learners' knowledge of the field of study and operations of the criminal justice system (CJS). The focus is directed at the study of different types of departments and role-players in the criminal justice cluster.

DR WITNESS MALULEKE AWARDED INSTITUTIONAL RESEARCH GRANT

Congratulations to Dr. Witness Maluleke, senior lecturer at the University of Limpopo (UL) for being awarded a R50 000.00 Grant for the 2019 short project within the UL niche areas under the theme of climate and sustainability. The funded project is entitled "The effects of climate change on rural livestock farming in the selected areas of Limpopo province". The core objective of this project was to explore the effects of climate change on rural livestock farming practices. Participants include livestock farmers and the Department of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries (DAFF) officials from the Limpopo province, focusing on Giyani, Lenting, Ga-Mphahlele and Malamulele rural areas. Dr. Maluleke collaborated with Dr FM Manganyi, Ms K Lekgau and Mr NP Tshabalala; all attached to the Department of Criminology and Criminal Justice at UL.

CONFERENCE CONTRIBUTIONS AND PRESENTATIONS

10th INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE ON SOCIAL SCIENCES (ICSS): ADVANCING INTER-DISCIPLINARY AND MULTI-DISCIPLINARY STUDIES ON SOCIAL SCIENCES, 3-5 SEPTEMBER, VANDERBIJLPARK, SOUTH AFRICA.

Dr. Siyanda Dlamini, a senior lecturer at the University of Fort Hare (UFH), presented a paper entitled “Poverty as a contributing factor to illegal hunting of antelope in Maloti-Drakensberg Park, KwaZulu-Natal” at the 10th International Conference on Social Sciences (ICSS). The key purpose of the study that the presentation focused was the exploration of contributory factors to illegal hunting of antelope in the Maloti-Drakensburg Park. The findings of this study demonstrated that poverty is the most common reason for the existence of such illegal hunting in this park and that there is a need for employment opportunities in the area. The recommendations included improvement of methods of education and awareness for the staff and community members on how they can reduce the levels of illegal hunting.

INTERNATIONAL RESEARCH CONFERENCE (IRC), 12-13 DECEMBER 2019, ROME, ITALY

Mr. Nkosingiphile Mbhele, a lecturer at the University of Kwa-Zulu Natal presented a paper entitled “Enforcing the Private Security Industry Regulation Authority and other legislative frameworks in South African drinking establishments” at the above mentioned conference. In his paper, he argued that the regulation and monitoring of the private security industry is the responsibility of the Private Security Industry Regulatory Authority (PSIRA). Further explained was that the regulatory body was established according to section 2 of PSIRA Act 56 of 2001 Furthermore, Mr. Mbhele highlighted that private security players in South Africa are obligated to comply with the PSIRA Act 56 of 2001 and the law in general. However, the dominating nature and culture of security in nightclubs deviate from the obligations of the PSIRA Act and the law. The study is a substantive review of literature discussing legislative frameworks guiding the operationalisation of private security in drinking establishments.

SOUTH AFRICAN POLICE SERVICE (SAPS) RESEARCH SEMINAR, 7- 8 NOVEMBER 2019, SAPS ACADEMY TSHWANE, PRETORIA

The theme of the above-mentioned seminar was entitled “Moving towards innovation through research and partnerships.” This research seminar was attended by SAPS officials, internal and external stakeholders in the Criminal Justice Sector, civil society and tertiary institutions involved in policing and the research of criminal justice systems. Dr. Manganyi, Dr. Maluleke and Mr. Tshabalala from the University of Limpopo (UL) presented at this seminar. The titles of their presentations are listed below:

Dr. W Maluleke: The use of Deoxyribonucleic Acid technology in combating stock theft in South Africa.

Mr. NP Tshabalala: Corruption by traffic police in the Malamulele area, Limpopo.

Dr. FM Manganyi: Community policing and partnership policing: A case study of shared responsibilities between the police and the Alice community.

REVIEW OF BOOK CHAPTER

Prof Francois Steyn

TOWARDS AN AFRICAN CRIMINOLOGY BY LUFUNO SADIKI, UNIVERSITY OF PRETORIA

The #RhodesMustFall and subsequent #FeesMustFall movements opened important debates about agency, privilege and equity in South African higher education. The academic project, which includes Criminology, came under close scrutiny for its lack of transformation in the domains of staffing, resourcing and curricula. The realities of, dilemmas associated with and nefarious impacts of a colonised academia reverberated – and continue to do so – throughout our tertiary institutions. Much has been written about Africanisation, indigenous knowledge systems and Afrocentrism in teaching, learning and research in higher education. In the chapter Towards an African Criminology – in the book A Southern African Perspective on Fundamental Criminology (Pearson South Africa, 2020) – Lufuno Sadiki not only provides a critique of colonial African Criminology, but she shifts debates around colonisation and westernisation in the direction of an unexplored yet distinctly concrete Criminology that already exists in (South) Africa.

While tying contemporary practices such as legal pluralism and African practices of conflict resolution closer to Criminology, Sadiki exposes an African Criminology that lay dormant for far too long. She reflects on pre-colonial mechanisms of dealing with conflict, for example the mato oput in Uganda, and pays particular attention to the Igbo in Nigeria and how their laws, investigation procedures and crime prevention strategies ensured the wellbeing of the people by means of traditional notions of social control. Sadiki adds words such as Okpara, Ndi Ichie, Ubeldia and Izu Ebu, to name but a few, to the Criminology lexicon. She questions the universality of Western theories of crime and criminality, and calls on local scholars to extend their gaze not only to other African countries for theory development, but also to other traditional world corners in exploring pre-colonial explanations of crime and its management. Sadiki's concluding thoughts provide much food for thought in taking a truly African Criminology forward. Towards an African Criminology is an opus long overdue and lays the foundation for further growth of and thinking about our discipline.

FORTHCOMING WORKSHOPS/CONFERENCES

31ST INTERNATIONAL POLICE EXECUTIVE SYMPOSIUM, AUGUST 16-21, 2020, RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL

Theme: Street policing: crime prevention in a risky world.

20TH ANNUAL CONFERENCE OF THE EUROPEAN SOCIETY OF CRIMINOLOGY, 9 – 12 SEPTEMBER 2020, BUCHAREST, ROMANIA

Theme: (I)llegal organizations and crime for contemporary criminology

The Bucharest Conference, in addition to dealing with the usual topics criminologists are working on, that can be easily defined as crimes perpetrated by individuals, will also focus on offences committed within different organisational frameworks. While putting together organisational crime and organized crime may seem surprising, it is clear that both forms of crime require a certain extent of political, financial or social influence in order to be successfully perpetrated. Generally, for both categories, money is the final goal. Nonetheless, the participation of individuals is mandatory. We therefore find the title “(I)llegal organizations and crime: Challenges for contemporary criminology” fitting for the ESC 2020 Bucharest conference, the Easternmost point of ESC conferences and the chosen place for their 20th Anniversary.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

All CRIMSA members are encouraged to send their most recent and substantive publications to be published in the newsletter.

BOOK PUBLICATIONS

Bezuidenhout, C (Ed.). 2020. A Southern African perspective on fundamental criminology. (2nd Ed). Cape Town. Pearson. ISBN 9781485715504.

The second edition of the Fundamental Criminology book is available. It was published 17 February 2020.

In the second edition of A Southern African perspective on fundamental criminology, a comprehensive overview is provided of the fundamental elements of criminology. The book aims to explain the nature and extent of crime, the reactions to crime, the impact of crime, reasons why crime occurs and ways in which offenders can be dealt with. In addition to highlighting the functioning of the criminal justice system, criminology in practice is also covered. This book is suitable for practitioners, academics and students who aim to work in the field of criminology and related sub-disciplines.
